Kersmith & Kickshaw deal in wax and Chinese eggs and carpet tacks. They are good sports in every way; they cough up money every day to make the town a better place in which to live and push your face. They hire a dozen clerks or more, who wait on patrons in their store. Our cross roads burg they would upbuild, and see it with glad people filled, and to that end they blow their seeds like truly patriotic lads. But when we need of eggs a few, we send away to Timbuctoo; and when a carpet tack we wish, it's shipped from Ypsilanti, Mich. Each has the notion in his home that things are best away from home, and so we order hods and hats, and hummingbirds and Maltese cats, from strangers in some town remote, who would not know us from a goat. We ship away our hard-earned kale, and get our fourth-rate junk by mail. Say, are we seers, or are we fools? Those strangers don't support our schools, or keep the peeler on his beat, or help to pave Commercial street. They do not paint the village pump or build a fence around the dump. If our old burg were blown away they wouldn't care a bale of hay. Kersmith & Kickshaw ought to get the local trade, already vet.

TRAFFIC REGULATIONS FOR SENATORS PLANNED

All Because of Smith and White's Differences on Street.

They are going to have a set of traffic regulations in the Senate. When two senators who have been close friends and whose affection for T. Jefferson and the democracy is uniformly undying cannot agree which side of an automobile is the right side to step around, other members of that august body declare that something definite must be done.

Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, who is a muscular man, and Senator White of Alabama, who has some strength of his own, are responsible for the Senate's determination. Senator Smith is positive that when an automobile comes charging down on you the proper thing is to step briskly to the left—not without dignity, of course, but briskly. Senator White is firmly convinced that you should step to the right.

Each is prepared to carry his convictions with him to the bitter end. Now the other afternoon these two senators were walking up Connecticut avenue discussing great problems in a spirit of perfect harmony. They started across the street when they saw an automobile, driven by one of those maniacs who wear goggles and hate speed regulations, bearing down upon them. They were in the path of the machine.

Argument Then Starts.

"This way, senator," said Senator Smith (so the report goes), as he got a firmer grip on his fellow-senator's arm. "Not at all, senator," replied Senator White, with dignity, as he placed a hand on Senator Smith's shoulder.

"Senator," said Senator Smith, in a gruff voice, "you are going the wrong way."

"Senator," responded Senator White, with firmness, "while I may not yet have reached your perfection in questions of government, I do know that you get out of the way of an automobile by turning to the right."

"Not at all, not at all," pointed out Senator Smith. "The left is the right in this instance."

All the time the automobile was coming closer.

"Senator," said Senator White, desperately, "I can quote Hine's precedents and establish the fact—"

"Senator," replied Senator Smith, briskly, "you had better come my way."

Each gave the other a pull. It was a test of strength men. Any ordinary senator would have been guided.

But these two senators are not ordinary men.

Senators Break Grips.

There came a blast from the automobile's horn, and at that instant the senators broke grips.

"The right," said Senator White, hoping in that direction.

"The left," Senator Smith called over his shoulder as he bounded that way.

Between them the automobile scurried, going like a Kansas tornado. When he had passed the senators gazed thoughtfully at each other and carefully avoided the subject of traffic rules thereafter.

But the story got out in the Senate, and so they are planning a series of rules to mention several others, decided that mediation was necessary.

GROCERS' HALF HOLIDAY THURSDAY OF EACH WEEK

Majority of Anacostia Dealers Adopt Plan Which Is Likely to Continue Year.

Nearly all of the grocers in Anacostia have entered into an agreement whereby in the future their places of business will be closed each Thursday afternoon at 1 o'clock. The proposition was made during the summer of 1913, when several of the grocers closed their stores for a half day Thursdays. Others, however, were not in favor of the movement, but several weeks ago the matter was revived and this year most of the grocers agreed to close during the summer months for this half day. Yesterday it was unanimously decided by those who subscribed to the agreement that the matter would be a permanent one and that the stores would close a half day Thursdays throughout the entire year.

The reason for this, as stated by one of the grocers yesterday, was to give the proprietors and clerks a half-day holiday each week. It was cited that the dealers in provisions were required to work very long hours each day, and late Saturday night, and it was only fair to the employees that this arrangement be adopted. The interest manifested in the movement by the citizens of the city and their support accorded the movement were also highly commended by the grocers, who stated that because of this interest the movement had been made possible.

HOMECOMING IN COFFIN AND NOT AS PLANNED

Sad Incidents Surround Murder of Weston Burwell in Mexico and Return of Body Here.

Instead of the happy homecoming that had been planned for more than twelve years, absence, Weston Burwell, the young mining engineer, who was murdered by the Mexican federales near Tampico, in the Ouzhama district, is being brought back in a coffin, and his mother, who has planned for the long-deferred family reunion, is in collapse and may not live to attend the last services over the body of her son.

The family home, at 662 Maryland avenue northeast, is a scene of great sadness. Since the report reached here, nearly two weeks ago, that the young engineer had been killed his mother and sister have hoped desperately that it might be proved that this story was not true. Yesterday, when they were officially notified by the Navy Department, through Secretary Daniels, who is a personal friend of the family, that the body had been recovered and would be brought to Washington as soon as possible, both mother and sister were overpowered by the sad news.

Today the sister, Miss Bessie Burwell, went to Rock Creek cemetery to select a burial plot. No further arrangements for the funeral have been made, as it is not yet possible to learn the date on which the body will reach Washington.

The last seen of Burwell was February 15, when he left a point below Tampico, where he was in charge of a dam construction. He was last seen in the interior to buy tools to replace those stolen by federales. It was on this expedition, it is believed, that he was murdered.

STARS AND POLICEMEN WINK AT PARK SCENES

Billy and Cooley to Be Found on Almost Any Bench, But One Should Not Stare.

"What is so rare as a day in June?" musically asked the poet. But what of the night? What about a June night? "Ah, belle nuit, sweet night of love!" chorle the countless couples who flock to the parks and squares and circles and triangles and other shaped grass plots of the city these warm nights, when the moon is shining and the stars slyly wink in the night. Sure they wink. They are winking at the lovey-dovey sights they see, because they do see them, take it from us and the moon.

Any night you choose, if you will go walking softly along the nice cement walks provided for that purpose in almost any park, before you have gone very far you will be sure to run upon some loving couple. Just how loving they are will depend a great deal upon the manner in which you make your entry, for some way or other, even folks who select public parks to get affectionate in do not like people to observe them.

Which is rather curious when you think of it. Billy and Cooley seek a shady, very shady, spot in the park; they sit down and bill and coo, and love and woo; and then if perchance they happen to look toward the police, they are sure to be angry. It usually makes Billy the maddest-Cooley, strange to say, never seems to mind much. But why should he? It is woman's divine privilege to love and be loved forthwith, and it is better to love in the parks than not to love at all.

Almost All Parks Alike.

Lafayette Square, Franklin Park, Lincoln Park, Dupont Circle, almost any park you choose to visit these nights, will show the same old phenomena—and phenomenon. The same old two, there they sit. She sits in the center of the bench, and he, solitarily, to one side, as interested in the bit of femininity next to him as he is in the stars and the moon, and were destined to die tomorrow.

Every park bench is a miniature Garden of Eden—a little ark built for two. There, spot in the park; they sit down and bill and coo, and love and woo; and then if perchance they happen to look toward the police, they are sure to be angry. It usually makes Billy the maddest-Cooley, strange to say, never seems to mind much. But why should he? MORE WOMEN ARE ROBBED WHILE ON SHOPPING TRIPS

Police Anxious to Apprehend Thieves Operating in Stores of the City.

The police are anxious to apprehend the thieves who have appeared in department stores at intervals for several weeks and robbed many shoppers. Two shoppers complained to the police yesterday, saying their money had been stolen while in stores.

Miss Julia Kimmell, a resident of Kensington, Md., complained that her handbag disappeared while she was in a store yesterday afternoon. It contained $4, a handkerchief and a railroad ticket.

Mrs. Horace Bond, Driscoll Hotel, made the other complaint. Her pocketbook was taken from the counter of a store while she was making a purchase, she stated, and it contained $1.50 in cash, a key and a check for $15.

Mrs. William F. Dorsey, 1527 6th street northwest, complained to the police of a robbery committed in her house yesterday during the absence of the family. Property valued at $200 was taken. Mrs. Dorsey stated that the plunder consisted of articles of clothing, jewelry and a luncheon set.

Leonard Reed, janitor at 1339 13th street northwest, told the police of a theft committed in his apartment yesterday morning. Entrances were gained by removing a screen from a basement window and $3.85 was taken.

Wins $5,000 Verdict.

Mrs. Della B. Funkhouser has been awarded a verdict for $5,000 damages against the Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington Railroad Company by a jury in Circuit Court No. 2 before Justice Anderson. Since the accident she has been deprived of the use of her arm.

Attorneys Michael J. Colbert and C. C. Lancaster appeared for the plaintiff. The company was represented by attorneys McKenney, Flannery & Hits and J. B. Craighill.
